www.tntextbooks.in

9.11 Types of joints

Joints are essential for all types of movements performed by the bony parts of the body. The joints are points of contact (Figure 9.13) between bones.

Sometimes they are playing a protective role in the process. Force generated by the muscles are used to carry out the movement through joints which helps human functional activity of daily living and ambulation. The joint acts as a fulcrum of a lever.

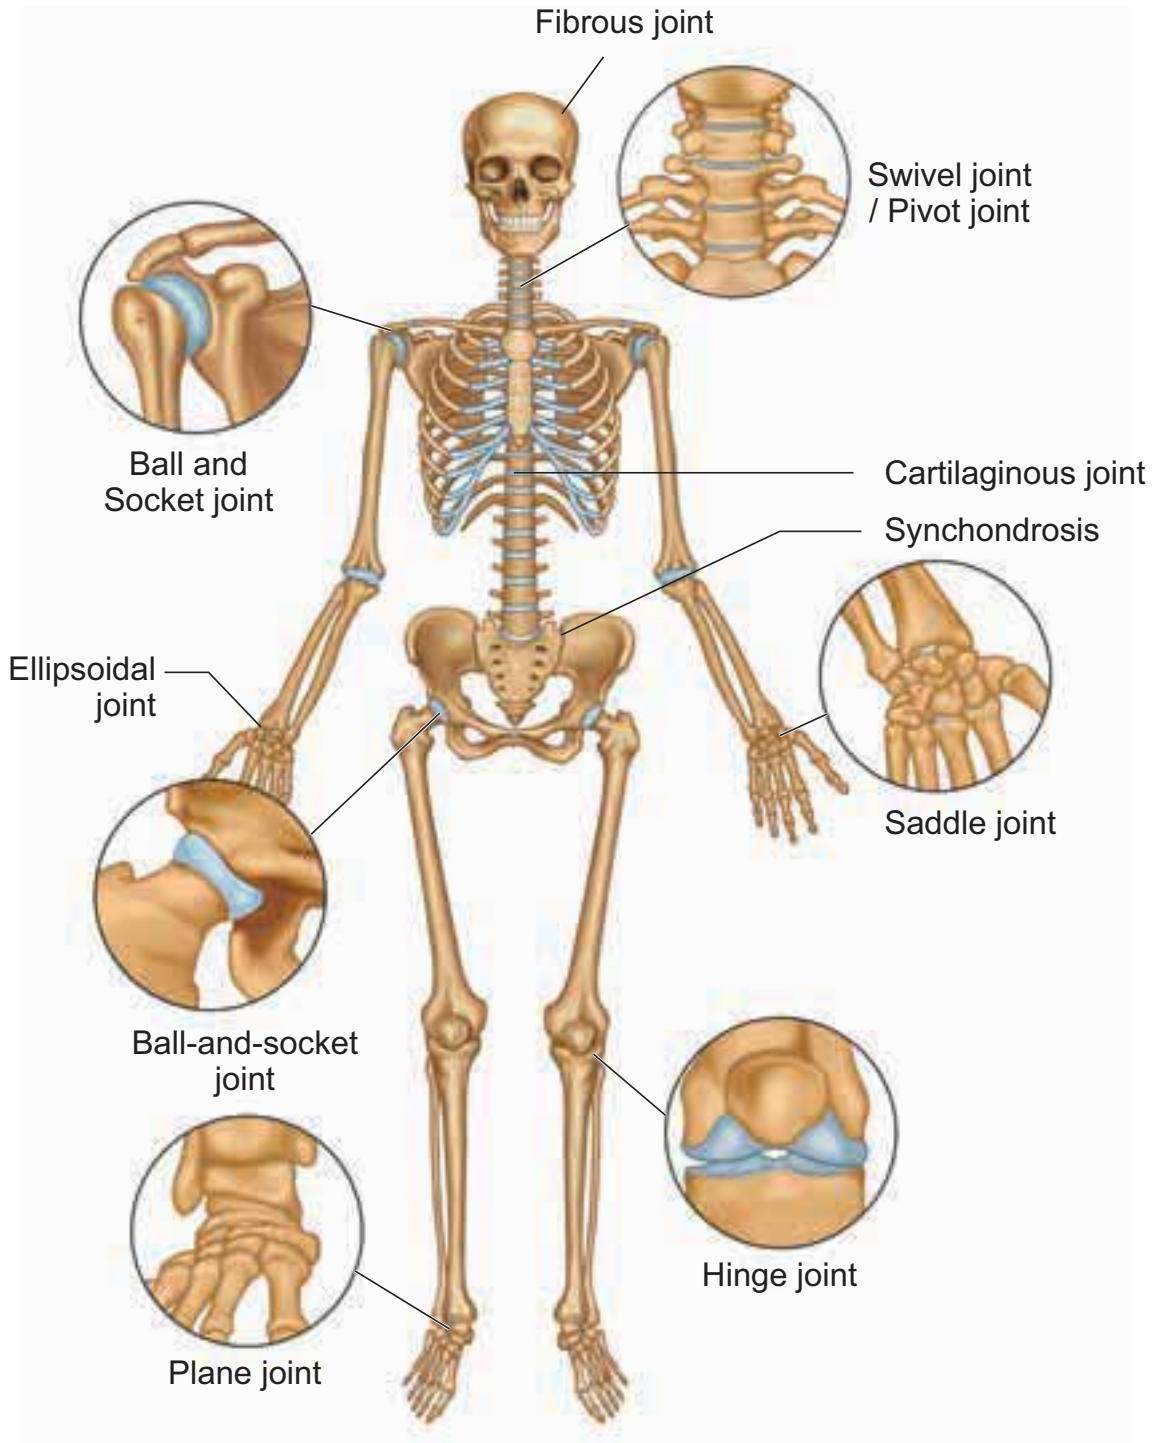

Figure 9. 13 Types of joints