Economic Importance of the family Musaceae

S.No	Economic importance	Binomial	Useful part	Uses
1	Food plant	Musa paradisiaca	The raw (tender green) bananas, the shaft and male buds. Leaves Fruit Flower stalk (Shaft) Fruits	Cooked and eaten as vegetable. Commonly used as plates on festive occasions and are widely used to wrap food items when cooking. Crunchy and salty fried plantain chips are delicious. Edible after cooking. Edible bananas which are sweet, rich in starch and vitamins.
		Ensete ventricosum Musa chinensis (Chinea kela)
2.	Medicinal plant	Musa spp.	Sap obtained from the sheathy leaf base.	Considered to be an antidote for cobra bite.
3.	Starch	Ensete ventricosum (Ethiopean banana)	The swollen basal parts of leaf sheaths	Used as a source of starch and vitamins.
4.	Fibre yielding plant	Musa textilis (Manila hemp)	Fibre	Fibre is woven and made into abaca cloth, also used for twine, bagging and wrapping paper.
5.	Ornamental plant	Musa coccinea (a wild banana species). (M. acuminata, M. velutina and M. ornata) Ensete ventricosum	Plant	Have ornamental scarlet flowers. Cultivated as ornamentals
		Ravenala madagascariensis* (traveller's palm), Strelitzia reginae* (bird of paradise) and Heliconia spp*.	Plant	Grown as ornamental plants

11th Botany_EM_Chapter 5.indd 136 06/01/2023 19:43:55