26.01 Export Trade.

Exports have attained greater importance in the contemporary world. It has emerged as one of the vital indicators of a nation's social, economical and political growth. No country in the world can produce all the goods and services it required. They have to inevitably buy and sell from one another. Therefore countries have to engage in international trade. Export and import represent two sides of the same coin of international trade. In other words the countries have to buy the goods which are either not available or not adequately available in home country and sell the surplus goods/ services produced by it to other countries which need them utmost. In short each and every country has to export surplus goods and import the deficit goods. In this process, it earns precious foreign exchange and use the foreign exchange thus earned for import goods which cannot be produced or adequately produced in the home country.

Developing countries like India, Bangladesh, South Korea and so on require substantial amount of foreign exchange in order to acquire machineries, equipment, raw materials, petroleum products, mineral resources, technical know-how, managerial talents and so on for their faster economic development. Government of India has initiated several steps to encourage exports. It has been promoting export by providing
